THE ETERNAL TRIANGLE

APR 3 1922

Tony Cat, the bootblack, is a "wiz" at playing the accordian and between shines improves each leisure moment. One day while he is taking his musical exercises, dainty Girlie Kid comes in for a polish and he does his prettiest to make a hit with the attractive miss. When handsome Dick Dog comes in for a shine he is attracted by the lovely Kid and jumps into a chair beside her. He practices his most winning wiles but Tony intercepts these fancy plays. Soon a fight is in progress. The Kid jumps down from the chair and exits gracefully. Dick Dog gets the better of Tony Cat and follows Miss Kid. The frivolous flapper looks back and sees Dick following her. Then she casts back playful glances which encourage her follower. After teasing him for awhile, she permits Dick to talk to her. Soon they are quite chummy and walk along arm in arm. They sit down upon a log and are soon lost in the throes of love. Now, it happens that Tony has revied and followed the Dog and Kid. He observes the two spooner and each time that Dick kisses the Kid, Tony heaves a rock at his dog rival. The rocks hit with telling blows, for they make Dick bite the Kid instead of kiss her. Although she cherishes his love she tells Dick she will not marry him unless he has his teeth pulled out. Tony overhears her and quickly gets an idea. He scampers off and paints a sign - "Painless Dentist At 7 Tin Can Alley". Then, he sent a duck sandwich sign carrier to fly to the lovable pair and display the advertisement. When Dick Dog reads the sign, he and his Kid chum decide that the teeth shall be extracted immediately. They go to the address named on the sign. Tony has arranged a dentist's office and is ready for them when they arrive. He wears a white hood so that his patient will not recognize him. When Dick sits in the chair Tony hits him on the head with a mallet and then administers gas. After a few moments the inflation causes Dick to swell up and he soon floats up to the ceiling. The Kid enters the room and faints at the sight of her lovers predicament. Tony picks her up in his arms and rushes off to church. As they enter the edifice the steeple bobs up and down ringing the bell. While the ceremony is in progress, Dick Dog floats out of the dentist's office and ascends skyward. He rubs noses with the planetary bodies and then suddenly runs into one of the sharp points of a star. Alas, he is punctured and as the gas escapes he falls earthward with rapidly increasing momentum. Just as Tony and his Kid bride march out of the church Dick falls at their feet. Tony Cat smiles triumphantly at Dick Dog and walks off with his bride, Miss Kid.

Moral: All is fair in love and war.
